

WOLVERINE

Healthcare Markets

*You want to provide industry leading health services to the world's population...
... We want to protect your people and facilities so you can.*

Structure fires in medical facilities cause approximately $52 million of property damage annually. These facilities often have unique requirements that their fire suppression systems must meet to efficiently protect lives and property. The human factor of patients and families makes protection in these facilities an important topic.

Wolverine Fire Protection is equipped with the experience, knowledge, and expertise to design detection and suppression systems in these medical environments. With experience in many hospital, lab, and other medical settings, our engineers and designers are capable of providing solutions for any unique application that the medical field may have.
